Once upon a time, there were two best friends – an ant and a grasshopper. The grasshopper liked to relax the whole day and play his guitar. The ant, however, would work hard all day. He would collect food from all corners of the garden, while the grasshopper relaxed, played his guitar, or slept. The grasshopper would tell the ant to take a break every day, but the ant would refuse and continue his work. Soon, winter came; days and nights became cold and very few animals went out.

On a cold day of winter, a lot of ants were busy drying out some grains of corn. The half-dead grasshopper, cold and hungry, came up to the ant who was his friend and asked for a piece of corn. The ant replied, "We work day and night to collect and save up the corn so that we don't die hungry on cold winter days. Why should we give it to you?" The ant asked again, "What were you doing last summer? You should have collected and stored some food. I told you as much before."

The grasshopper said, "I was far too busying singing and sleeping."

The ant replied, "You can sing all winter as far as I am concerned. You will not get anything from us." The ant had enough food to last through the winter, without any worries at all, but the grasshopper didn't and he realised his mistake.

Once upon a time, a lone elephant made her way into a strange forest. It was new to her, and she was looking to make friends. She came to a monkey and said, "Hello, monkey! Would you like to be my friend?" The monkey said, "You are too big to swing like me, so I can't be your friend." The elephant then went to a rabbit and asked the same question. The rabbit said, "You are too big to fit in my burrow, so I can't be your friend." The elephant also went to the frog in the pond and asked the same question. The frog replied, "You are too heavy to jump as high as me, so I can't be your friend."

The elephant was really sad because she couldn't make friends. Then, one day, she saw all the animals running deeper into the forest, and she asked a bear what the fuss was about. The bear said, "The lion is on the loose – they are running from him to save themselves." The elephant went up to the lion and said, "Please don't hurt these people. Please leave them alone." The lion scoffed and asked the elephant to move aside. Then, the elephant got angry and pushed the lion with all her might, injuring him. All the other animals came out slowly and started to rejoice about the lion's defeat. They went to the elephant and said to her, "You are just the right size to be our friend!"

Remain Unchanged

Feter's father wants to know how his son is getting along in school. One day he asks him: "Peter, how are you getting along in school?" What seat do you have in the class? Does the teacher place you in seats according to your marks?" 'Yes, Father."

"Number twenty-one."

And how many students are there in your class?"

"Twenty-one, Father."

Several weeks pass, Peter, who is a less advanced student and studies very little, brings home the school report of his monthly examination.

"How are you getting along in school now, Peter?" asks his father. "Your marks do no seem to be very good."

"I am getting along much better now, Father."

"What is you place in the class now?"

"Number twenty now."

"Good. Then you are one place ahead."

"No, Father. One of the students left the class. His family moved to another town."
